The new Justice League from DC is very hot, and the art by Kevin Maguire is just one of the reasons.

NEXT ISSUE:
CPQ TAKES A LOOK AT ECLIPSE AND VIZ INTERNATIONAL AND THEIR VERY HOT COMICS: KAMUI, MAI: THE PSYCHIC GIRL, AND AREA 88.

MARKET IN A NUTSHELL

AIRCEL

Warlock 5 continues to sell very well, actually outselling such standbys as Elflord and Samurai. Maelstrom appears to be another Aircel hit. Watch Starstone, a combination of John Byrne and Japanimation.

COMICO

Robotech 3-D is very hot. SOld suprisingly well dispite being a reprint and the $2.50 cover price. Elementals and Justice Machine slowing a bit, while Mage and Grendel are as strong as ever. Watch Grendel with the new art team.

DARK HORSE

Concrete still leads the way, although a monthly schedule would help a lot. The American still selling well while Mecha has slowed a bot waiting for the next issue. Overall a very strong company.

DC

Still incredibly strong. Millennium selling extremely well, while the numbers for Green Arrow #1 came in at X-Men levels. Justice League still selling very quickly while Flash appears to be slowing. new art team on Flash may have an effect - watch it. Doom Patrol steady but not hot.

ECLIPSE

Japanese books already slowing. Airboy and everything associated with it is very hot. Hopefully, with Miracleman back on schedule, we all can move some back issues.

FIRST

Lone Wolf and Cub still selling well, although not selling out. Some people say it's slowing already, but numbers are so high that it just looks like it's slowing. Watch for new American Flagg. Don't expect much out of the new Jon Sable. Only Mike Grell can do his own book.

MARVEL

The Last Kraven story is very hot. Followed by the Spiderman goes crazy story, and Spiderman is on the move again. G.I. Joe appears to be slowing a little, while Transformers looks to be gaining ground. All the mutant books are moving well, but with the Fall of the Mutants coming watch out. Initial reaction is very strong. Make sure you have enough. Nam is still selling very well, while Punisher and Silver Surfer appear to be slowing already. Punisher will stay middle of the road, but Surfer is not the Surfer of old. Better luck next time.

JUSTICE LEAGUE INTERNATIONAL IS HOT! RED HOT!

The new Justice League (International) is hot. Red hot! But why? Why is this new incarnation of DC Comics oldest super-hero group so much better than it's predecessor? Why is a bunch of little known heroes more popular than the giants like Superman, Wonder Woman, et al? To find out, we must look at the ingredients used to creat this monthly masterpiece and only then can we discover the true Justice League phenomenon.

Art, the most basic ingredient of any comic book, is one of the largest contributors to the Justice League phenomenon. Kevin Maguire brings a new freshness to a book that for a long time was the dumping grounds of old artists. Sure, George Perez got his start on the old League, and until recently, Luke McDonnell was at the helm, but what happened in between. Nothing. At least nothing to write home about. Then along comes Mr. Maguire who makes the new League look real. You see facial expressions; you see details; you feel like you're part of the story and not just a passerby. The feeling is very reminiscent of the John Byrne days over on the X-Men. You feel the story, because the art is a large part of the story, not just an explanation of what's going on. Kevin Maguire is a talent to keep an eye on.

Along comes Keith Giffen, the Ambush bug man, to give the new team character. And character they have. No,longer is the team a one-dimensional entity who does everything as though they are connected at the navel. Now we see different personalities conflicting, combining and overall reacting as would real people. And then, to top it all off, Mr. Giffen give the whole shebang some humor. Not outrageous humor ala Ambush Bug, but realistic humor as you would find in real life. After all, these people are in a pretty high stress type of living, and being serious all the time would lead to definate mental problems. So, in order to break the stress, they poke fun at each other, throwing witticisms around like frisbees, sexual inuendoes are second nature (not direct ones, but subtle) and Batman holds it all together with his inimitable style.

So we have art, we have story, but is that enough? Lot's of books have good art and a good story (The Question for example) and don't reach the popularity of the new Justice League. So what else is there? Well for one, they are a team. The comic collector is infatuated with the team. With few exceptions, the team has been more popular than the individual. Look at the new Justice League and you'll see several cases in point. Booster Gold is trying to hold his own title above water, but he is a very integral part of the new League. Mr. Miracle could only suuprt a one-shot special, while Shazam could go one better with a 4 issue mini-series. J'nn J'onnz, Black Canary and Guy Gardner don't even garner ther own books (although Guy does show up occasionaltly in The Green Lantern Corps). With the exception of Batman and Captain Atom (both of whom are enjoying varying degrees of success in their own books) all the characters are doing better as members of a team than they ever would on their own, again reinforcing the fact that collectors like teams better than individuals.

Above and beyond everything else, I think the biggest reason for the new League's success is a certain amount of similarity to a certain team over at the "other" company. Yes, I am talking about none other than Marvel's own mutant outcasts the X-Men. Granted there are certain differences, but overall the picture is of a team with a somewhat set leader, lot's of participants who work well together, but take time to accept each other, and a person in the background who tries to keep things on an even keel (for the Justice League it's Maxwell Lord). I think if you look at the new League, and compare it to the new X-Men when they first came out, you will find a lot of similarities as a team. Individually there is no comparison, but as a team network, there are certain similarities that cannot be ignored. And I think that it is these similarities that make the new Justice League as good (actually, in this reviewers opinion, better) than the X-Men. If you like the X-Men, try the new Justice League. After all, remember how much X-Men Giant Sized #1 (the first appearance of the new X-Men) if worth these days.
